Containing the freshest Advices, Foreign and Domestic.

From MONDAY September 23d, to THURSDAY October 3d, 1751.

A Sloop that arrived from Bermuda on Monday Morning, having spoke with Capt. Hunt, from London, on the Coast, was postponed the Publication of this Paper till his Arrival, for fresh Advices: And he arriving last Night, the following Paragraphs are taken from the latest Prints.

L O N D O N, June 29.

Extract of a letter from Stockholm [the capital of the kingdom of Sweden] June 25, N.S.

THE 19th instant about noon, a fire broke out in the church of St. Clara, in the Norder-Malm, and spread so furiously, that in a short time this fine edifice was reduced to ashes, with several circumjacent houses; and as the wind was very high, the sparks were carried to other houses at some distance, which were likewise burnt down to the ground. The same day at one in the afternoon, another fire happened in the Suder-Malm, which did a great deal of damage; and about nine in the evening a fire broke out at a brewhouse, which was likewise reduced to ashes with several other contiguous buildings. The king being informed of these disasters, posted up to town from Ulrichsdale, repaired to the places where there was the most danger, and gave his orders so judiciously, that the fire was extinguished the next morning; after which his majesty returned to Ulrichsdale. The 21st about nine in the morning, another fire broke out in the market place of the Suburb, called Ladugarstrand; and the next day the like accident happened in the same Suburb, near the place called Packer Market. We cannot yet give an exact account of the damage done by all these fires, nor tell how many houses have been laid in ashes. As it is not known by what accident so many fires should happen in so short a time, and as it is suspected to be the handy work of some execrable villains, the government has this day published a proclamation, promising a reward to any person that shall discover the incendiaries. On this occasion the king has resolved to return with all the court from Ulrichsdale, and fix his residence in this metropolis.

Yesterday was held a board of admiralty, when Edward Boscawen, Esq; and William Rowley, Esq; took their seats at the board accordingly.

Their lordships were likewise pleased to appoint Captain Hawes to be commander of the Deptford of 60 guns, who is ordered to be fitted out with all expedition.

The same day their lordships appointed Capt. Popperton to be commander of the Basilisk Bomb, lately converted into a Sloop of 16 guns.

Yesterday his majesty was pleased to appoint the right hon. the earl of Halifax, first lord of trade and plantations, to be secretary of state for those provinces.

London, July 1. Letters from Portugal advise, that his portuguese majesty had issued an ordonnance, whereby he forbids the bishops making or ordaining any priest whatever without his special leave and licence; and also orders the heads of the friars convent not to admit any more of that function—his majesty plainly discerning the disadvantages arising from the increase of those people in his kingdom.

London, July 2. By letters from Rome we have advice, that on the 11th of June, N.S. in the night, three shocks of an earthquake were felt at Gemini, as also at Castle-novo, Terni and Narni, the inhabitants of which places were so terrified, that they all got out of their beds, and abundance of them posted away into the fields half naked. Several houses were quite overthrown, and others very much damaged by the earthquake.

According to advices from Vienna, they begin again to talk of the election of a king of the Romans, and it also appears that they depend on the vote of one of the electors that had not yet explained himself on this head, and who, as they give out, will certainly accede to the treaty of the year 1746, between the house of Austria and Russia: And this elector is supposed to be Saxony.

We hear from Barcelona, that they have received orders from court to lay up large quantities of provisions and warlike stores, which are said to be partly destined for the West-Indies, and the rest for an expedition against the Algerines, or against the Imperialists in Italy, or else to go and take possession of Corsica; they can't tell which: In the mean time the king's commissaries are visiting the magazines at Barcelona, and taking an account of the stores actually therein.

London, July 5. Two noblemen of distinguished abilities, who have formerly served their country with great zeal and spirit, are mentioned in public, as one or the other, intended to be sent ambassador to the court of Versailles; which at this juncture would give great satisfaction to all who desire the preservation of the tranquillity and independence of Europe.

London, July 6. Application has been made to the board of ordnance, for a repair of the rails round Tower-ditch, a thing long wanted, and which, if performed properly, may prevent many accidents, if not murders, &c. the ensuing winter.

Monday morning his excellency the earl of Albemarle, arrived at his house in great george-street, from Paris.

Last sunday general Bland arrived in town from Gibraltar.

The right hon. the lord Hyndford is, we hear, to succeed the earl of Holderness as ambassador to the states general.

They write from Placentia, that cardinal Alberoni has disposed of the capital sum of 3,000,000 of ducats, which he had in the banks of England and Holland, in order to retrieve their commerce, which was at a stand.

Paris, July 9. The count de St. Florentin, secretary of state, and M. de Rouille, secretary of state for the department of the marine, are both nominated ministers of state by his majesty. M. Rouille is become the darling of the court and people, for his great diligence and industry in restoring the marine, which is now in almost as good a condition as it was before the great sea fight off La Hogue in the year 1692.

London, July 8. We hear the right hon. the earl of Albemarle will go again to France, in the character of ambassador to his britannic majesty.

A building is now carrying on of 200 yards in length, and 20 in breadth, intended for a sick and an inoculating hospital for the small-pox, and offices for a surgeon, apothecary, nurses, &c.

While we are daily alarm'd with accounts of robberies, &c. it is excusable, at least, to suggest whatever remedies occur, in hopes they may prove useful. Amongst these, the following seems obvious and practicable, viz. To restrain the number of ale-houses, shuffle-boards and scittle-grounds, which are so many seminaries for thieving, and to grant no licences, but on the petition, or recommendation at least, of creditable house-keepers, certifying the person's character who desires it. [Would it be thought, if those who apply for licences to keep public houses, billiard-tables, &c. in other parts, (and are not well known to the justices) should be refused licences, till they could produce petitions or recommendations as aforesaid?]

By letters from Constantinople of the 4th of June N.S. we have advice, that the Crim Tartars have made another incursion into the Ukrain, and plundered 3 or 4 villages: A body of Cossacks being sent against them, they retired, and the Cossacks pursued them as far as Precop, where the Tartars faced about, and a bloody engagement ensued, in which great numbers fell on both sides. As it was expected that the Russian court would complain of this affair, every body at Constantinople waited impatiently for such a complaint, and the Porte's answer to it.

According to advices from Hamburg, it should seem that there is still room to apprehend a war in the North. notwithstanding some late respectable Puffs have insinuated the contrary; for they say, that the grand duke of Russia has resolved to augment his troops in Holstein, and give the command of them to prince George of Holstein, brother of the king of Sweden, who is actually a major-general in his prussian majesty's service.

According to letters from the Hague, some politicians in that country cannot help sneering at the tedious negotiations at Madrid, and seem to wonder how their good friends and allies can be so patient, while a mutinous spirit in the West-Indies, and the enterprising humour of the states of Barbary, put it in their power to bring that court to their own terms.

Copenhagen, July 3. The little squadron that pur to sea some time since, and was supposed to be bound for the Mediterranean, has steered northward, as we hear; and as the ships are double mann'd, and moreover carry some hundreds of soldiers, with abundance of implements for building houses and clearing grounds, many are of opinion that a new colony is the business in hand.

London, July 9. Yesterday his majesty was pleased to appoint the right hon. the earl of Albemarle, first lord of the bed-chamber, and groom of the Stole, to be lord of the privy purse to his majesty.

Last wednesday came on the election of three African commissioners, for the city of London, Bristol, and Liverpoole, when William Bowden, Abraham James Hüllhouse, and Samuel Touchet, Esqrs. were chosen in the behalf of the respective freemen and merchants, without opposition.

Stockholm, June 29. The number of houses consumed by the late fire amounts to near 1000; among which we reckon the fine house of the senator Thuro Bielcke, another magnificent edifice belonging to baron Palsierne, the superb church of St. Clara, the hotel of the late president Rolam, and many other considerable edifices both in the north and south quarters. The ships and galleys, and also the arsenals and granaries, which lie in those quarters, were in great danger, but happily received no damage, the king's directions, for preventing the flames spreading towards them, having been extremely well executed.

It is pretended that some combustible materials have been found in divers parts of the town, and some suspicious persons have been taken up: A reward of 2000 ducats is also offered to such as may discover any of the incendiaries, with a free pardon to any one that shall discover his accomplices, &c.

It being generally believed that these were not accidental fires, some of the inhabitants, that lost their all, gave a loose to their suspicions, and in the height of their rage and despair, splot and abused in the streets persons of every rank and condition, accusing them of being concerned with the incendiaries; nay, they informed against many, whom the government soon found to be innocent; and not content with these irregularities, they insulted a certain foreign minister, as he was passing thro' the streets with a small retinue; but that minister, without betraying the least concern at their scurrilous reflections, or suffering any of his servants to resent it, repaired directly to count Teflin, and complained of this ill usage, desiring that the king would take some course to prevent a repetition of it: And in an hour after the following proclamation was read in every quarter of the town.

His majesty has heard with the greatest displeasure, that on occasion of the fires, with which this city has been visited, some persons have been found rash enough to talk disrespectfully of certain ministers residing here on the part of foreign powers, and that they have behaved altogether as inconsiderately towards the subjects of the same powers. As the king lives in perfect harmony with all those powers, his majesty earnestly desires and charges all and every one to abstain from such proceedings, on pain of death. Moreover, several persons have already been taken into custody, and by their means the real causes of those reiterated conflagrations have been partly discovered.

This proclamation, and other steps taken by the court, have pacified the populace, and removed their prejudices. Count Panin, the Russian minister, has sent away a courier to Petersburg, with a large packet of dispatches.

London, July 10. Letters from Radom in Poland bring advice, that about the end of last month a terrible fire broke out there, which laid in ashes above eighty houses, and the castle of that place. They say it began in a Jew's house on a Saturday, which being their Sabbath, they would not stir a finger till it was too late.

The 30th of last month, N.S. another dreadful fire happened at Wernigerode, a town belonging to the Count of Stolberg, which continued 24 hours, in which space of time the principal church, with 86 brewhouses, 34 distillers houses, 128 barns and granaries, and above 100 other houses were reduced to ashes.

Advices from Brest take notice, that they have a great number of hands at work in the king's yards and docks who are so regularly paid, that not one of them can have there is a fortnight's wages due to him. Whether they intend this as a snare upon any of their neighbours, is but known to themselves.

Yesterday the lords of the admiralty appointed Capt. I. Bass commander of the Captain, a 70 gun ship.

Some days ago as a gentleman, formerly a lieutenant of a man of war, was going to take water, a person approached him, who very gravely ask'd him whether he knew him. And upon his answering in the negative, was knock'd down by an unexpected blow from the person, who desired him to remember that there was a time, when, by his authority, he had received some lashes; and as they were now upon a footing in point of station, he could not help taking that first convenient opportunity of discovering his resentment; and that tho' he was then in a mean situation, he had a spirit above bearing affronts with impunity.

CHARLES-TOWN, October 3.

Many of our readers having inquired the reason, why some extraordinary intelligence, not long since received, was not inserted in our Gazette? we hope it may be permitted us to answer, we were not permitted to do it.

There has lately happened a skirmish with some Indians, not many miles from this metropolis; of which we have not yet had any particular accounts given us.

PORT ROYAL plains, let ever balmy dew,
Pouring from crystal sluices, water you;
And from their silver urns the Pleiads pour
The fruitful rains and soft prolific show'r;
May Sol's bright influence on your fields remain,
And sharpen'd sickles crop the ripen'd grain.
God! of Port-Royal, and of all the sphere,
Grant these thy blessings on the present year.

Let Damon's death, a public warning be,
To all Port Royal youths as well as me.
He liv'd, he died, and we all hope is blest:
O! may he be prepar'd to stand the test.

Teach us O! God, in virtue's paths to tread,
That we may rest with thee above when dead.
